

I am opposed to any proceeding that would diminish the effect of the Indiana Privacy Law. This proceeding is too subjective; it is not nearly restrictive enough. The Indiana law has been very beneficial. In the past, we would not even answer the phone in the evenings because we were receiving numerous telemarketing calls. We now have more enjoyable family time, thanks to the Indiana law. This proceeding would allow more calls to disrupt our family time, since it would allow many more unsolicited and unwanted calls from groups that may have had some sort of connection with us in the past. My family believes that the Indiana law is very effective.
